SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1874.

[For the "ORANGEBURG NEWS,"]

A large number of citizens held a meeting at Mr. W. L. W. Riley's place, in the Fork on Saturday last, the 9th of May. The object of the meeting was to muster in a company to form part of the 10th Regiment N. G. S. C. At 12 o'clock M. the company was formed into line, numbering about eighty men. Captain John H. Phillips, of the Rocky Grove company, formed the line, called the roll, and announced the company ready to be mustered in, which was done in accordance with the Regulations of the N. G. S. C. by Lieut. Colonel A. F. Browning. The company then by acclamation confirmed the election of its officers, previously chosen by ballot. Captain J. C. Jamison then assumed command of the new company and assisted by his able First Lieutenant B. G. Frederick, drilled his men for a short time. These military exercises being concluded, the large assembly then resolved itself into a Mass Meeting. W. L. W. Riley, Esq., was first called upon for a speech, which he made in good style, announcing to the company his donation of a Muster Ground, for the purposes of Drill and Muster of the company. Mr. Commissioner Alex Brown, the strong man of the Precinct, then delivered a telling and effective speech, which was well received by his hearers. Then came John H. Phillips Esquire, the popular Judge and the Republican "Wheel Horse of the Fork." Mr. Phillips was in his happiest mood, and for a long time, kept his audience entertained with one of his witty, humorous and pithy speeches, for which he is famous. His onslaught on corruption was scathing and terrific. He was frequently interrupted by peals of laughter and rounds of applause, and took his seat more popular than ever. Lieut. Col. A. F. Browning was then loudly called for, and made a few remarks. Lieutenant B. G. Frederick next made a forcible and good speech, whose reception showed Mr. Frederick to be very evidently one of the rising and winning men of his locality. Mr. George W. Baxter, next entertained the assembly with a neat and pertinent address.

The meeting then adjourned. Two things were plainly shown: first, that the good and true men of the Fork are well able to take care of the "Fork" and second, that the Fork is in earnest to put down dishonesty and corruption in politics and to demand honest men for office.

Not Inconsistent.

We have been accused of wavering in our opposition to misgovernment and ring rule, because we have shown a disposition to secure the nomination of D. H. Chamberlain for governor by the next republican convention.

To this charge we reply, that it argues no inconsistency to accept a partial good when it is impossible to get all that we desire.

We take it for granted that the candidate of the regular republican convention will be elected, unless it should be Moses or Elliott, or some equally bad man, if there is such a one. Now Chamberlain would be a governor so infinitely preferable to either of those that we think even the conservatives would unite on him if he were a bolting candidate.

There is no pretence that he has profited by the extravagances and frauds of the present administration, and while he was a member of the Scott administration his sins were those of omission, rather than of commission. In fact, the charges which may be brought against him are of a very general character, and equally apply to almost every republican in the state, viz: that he did not sooner discover and more vehemently oppose the errors and frauds of the second term of Scott's administration. He did join in the opposition to extravagance, and his words with those of Mr. Corbin, were very much relied upon by the memorialists in their efforts in Washington.

We do not say that he did all his duty. He might have known more of what was done, and might have presented much. This we think, but may be mistaken even in that.

Chamberlain was really more fully imbued with the doctrines of the radical party than any leader in it. He was ready to carry out the theory of universal suffrage, and rejoiced in the opportunity of testing its value in South Carolina, under what he knew was the most unfavorable circumstances. He had faith in the success of the experiment. He expected many failures. He was too deep a thinker and too good a student of history to look for perfection, or even a government unmarred by selfishness and demagogism. Therefore these evils which appeared so monstrous to opponents of radicalism, were to him only incidental, not inherent in the system. Hence, he suppressed impatience and disgust and hopefully looked to a vindication, when all parties had become accustomed to the new order of things.

Thus his reluctance to accuse his party of misdeeds may have had a higher motive than that attributable to such as joined the party, as they had previously joined the secessionists, because it led to power and wealth.

But, admitting that he is justly censurable in some things. He is, at least a gentleman; he has ability; he has culture; he has preserved himself from the grosser forms of corruption; he has shown a pride of character, which marks him as separated from the herd of wolves by which he has been sometimes surrounded; he has an ambition to win for himself a name in the nation he will never disgrace us by a scandal such as now makes one blush to live in the state.

Now, if this, his nomination will indicate a corresponding improvement in other nominations. We may hope for a better senate and a better house of representatives. It will be, we hope, a new departure.—Port Royal Commercial May the 7th.

Queen Victoria's Ghost.

Many years ago, Lady Flora Hastings was a Maid of Honor at the Court of Queen Victoria. The breath of scandal blew upon her fair fame. She was a beautiful and artless woman, full of vivacity, and, from very innocence, was betrayed into the whirlpool of malignant gossip. Instead of shielding her Maid of Honor, the youthful Queen countenanced the vile conspiracy against her reputation and banished her from Court. Not long after this, Lady Flora Hastings died of a broken heart, but lived long enough to prove her spotless reputation. She was a relative of the Bute family, and this powerful branch of the English nobility never gave the Queen for the treatment she accorded the unfortunate Lady Flora. Gradually, however, this sad circumstance died into a memory, until its revival the other day, by the death of the Countess of Luodon, the sister of Lady Flora Hastings. Prior to her death, the Countess of Luodon steadfastly refused to respect or have anything to do with Victoria or her affairs. Through a long life, she treasured up that stricken sister's wrong, and has left a heritage of revenge, which is one of the most remarkable in history. In her will she left this command:

I further wish my right hand to be cut off and buried in the park a Castle Donington, at the head of the hill to the Trent, and a small cross or stone over it, with the motto, "I bide my time."

Hard by the "Hill of Trent" is one of the Queen's many palaces. If Victoria should go near Castle Donington, the memory of Lady Flora Hastings would pursue her, through the medium of the Countess of Luodon's buried hand and the vindictive inscription on the marble cross. If she does not visit her country seat, near the hill of Trent, the populace will ascribe her neglect to do so to supernatural reasons. In any event, the poor Queen must be bitterly punished for her early error and Lady Flora will be terribly avenged. But, it does seem rather more Pagan than Christian that a woman should carry into the dread world beyond such unrelenting hatred, especially as it is to be presumed that she recognized in the Cross of Christ a token of forgiveness, rather than vindictiveness, and must have prayed betimes to be forgiven as she forgave her fellows. Surely, beautiful and now blessed Lady Flora did not need this awful memento of her sister's wrath, and mighty was the risk taken by Countess Luodon to send a random shaft into the stricken heart of England's honored Queen. Still, this proves that nothing is so deadly as scandal calumny, and that those who retail it and those who abet it are doomed, while living, to suffer penalties in their own persons, which all the perfumes of Arabia can never wash away.

A policeman on duty in the yard, seeing what the unfortunate man was about to do, warned him of the danger he would incur. To this he paid no heed, relying upon his skill as a train hand to accomplish his purpose. One of his legs was cut off and stomach shockingly lacerated. The coroner ampaneled a jury of inquest, which adjourned to meet again on Wednesday, when the matter will be investigated.—News and Courier.

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.—The following is said to be a cure for drunkenness and the love for strong drink:

Sulphate of iron, five grains; pepper-mint water, eleven drachms; spirits of nutmeg, one drachm. Twice a day. This preparation acts as a tonic and stimulant, and so partially supplies the place of the accustomed liquor, and prevents that absolute physical and moral prostration that follows a sudden breaking off from the use of stimulating drinks. It is to be taken in quantities equal to an ordinary dram, and as often as the desire for a dram returns.
